

POLICE REINFORCEMENTS SEEK TO HALT FURTHER FRENCH RIOTS

'HANG LAVAL' VETS SHOUT IN STREET

PARIS, Saturday, July 20. (AP) Heavy police reinforcements were pressed into service today in the government's effort to another any recurrence or continuation of workers' riotous demonstrations of protest against Premier Laval's widespread economy pay cuts.

Thousands of war veterans and railroad and government employees who jammed the Place de l'Opera with cries of "hang Laval" and chants of the Internationale, continued their demonstrations and fighting throughout the night in defiance of the government order which expressly forbade such manifestations.

Guards Restrained
Despite the order, the police displayed a minimum of activity. The mobile guards and the mounted republican guards were equally restrained, the government apparently preferring to regard the demonstration as a safety valve outlet for its critics' emotions.

Workers at Brest broke through police lines. They were allowed to parade and sing the Internationale peacefully.

Strikes Rumored
Impending strikes among some groups of the workers were rumored in the capital.

In the crowded meeting called by the National Federation, which represents three and a half millions of all creeds, considerable division developed over the subject of pension cuts.

Singing of the Communist hymn by leftists caused many of the veterans to walk out. Those remaining voted for the majority resolution of protest.

RELIEF SURETY BILL SIGNED

SACRAMENTO, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—Supplementary to the $24,000,000 appropriation set aside in the 1935-37 budget for unemployment relief, the Sharkey bill setting up new safeguards to insure the expenditure of relief funds in proper channels was signed today by Governor Merriam.

The measure specifically provides that no person may obtain relief if he refuses to accept employment unless the state administrator makes an exception.

BUSINESS WOMEN END CONVENTION

SEATTLE, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs convention delegates went for a steamship ride and an all-day frolic in Victoria, B. C. today after a night session devoted to sex-equality resolutions, wound up their biennial convocation here.

While the convention adopted its own committee's slate of resolutions demanding no discrimination against women and asking no special protective measure for business and professional women, it rejected a "Lucretia Mott amendment" resolution submitted from the floor by Sue Brobst, Los Angeles. This was rejected on the ground that its wording of equal rights for men and women would remove needed protection for women industrial workers.

JUDGE RULES TWO NEED NOT TESTIFY

LOS ANGELES, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—The special senate committee investigating liquor conditions here prepared to proceed with its inquiry today, despite the fact that a court ruling had upheld a witness' reluctance to testify before the group.

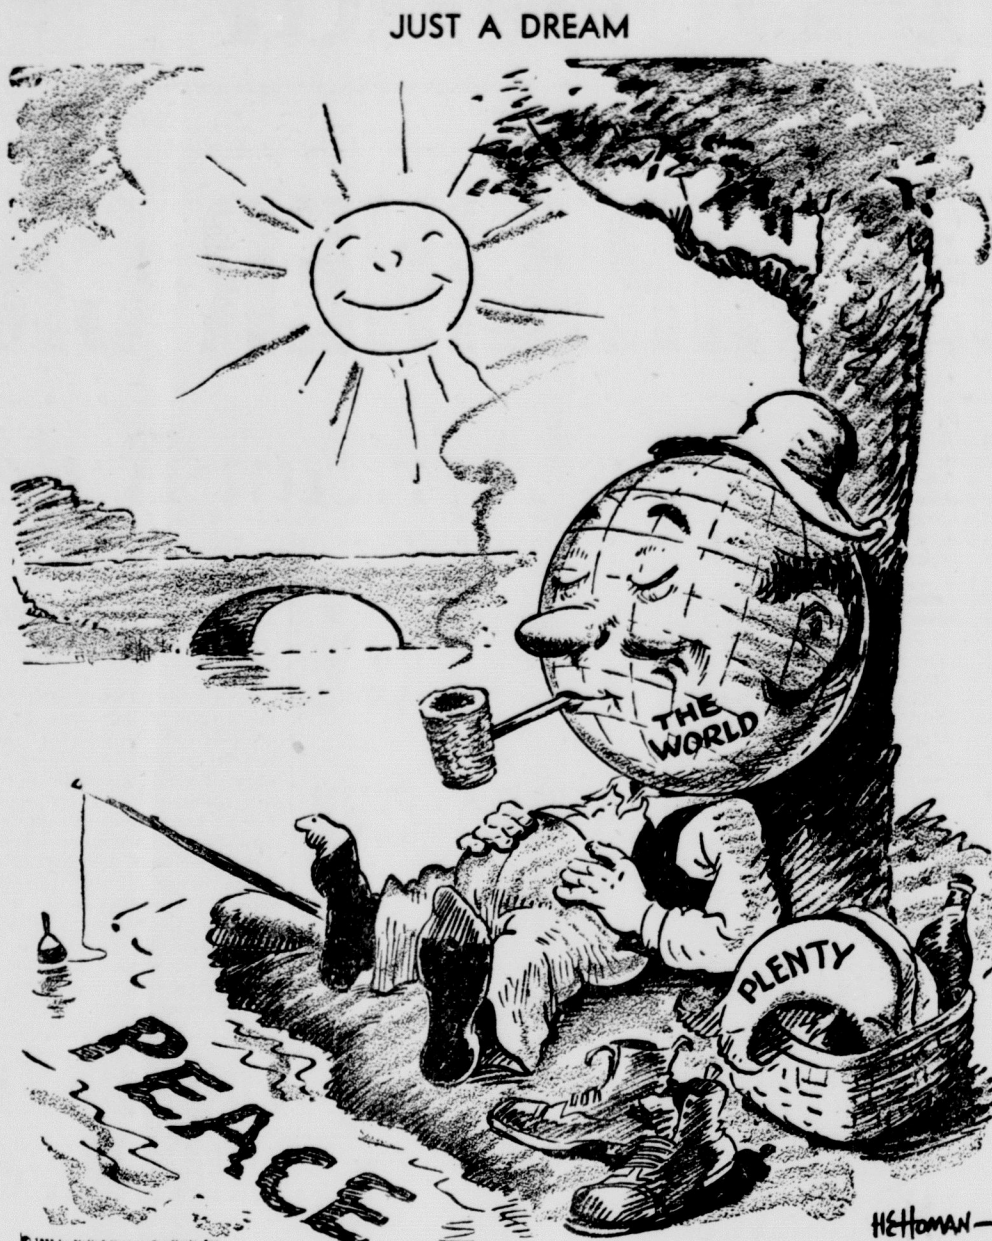

Superior Judge Reuben Schmidt yesterday dismissed contempt charges filed by the committee against Frank Sebastian, Culver City night club operator, and Walter Pollock, his floor manager, who refused to answer questions propounded in connection with the probe.

Judge Schmidt declared the committee had exceeded the scope of its judicial powers, and granted writs of habeas corpus filed to assure freedom of the two witnesses.

JAPAN DENIES SOVIET CLAIM

TOKYO, Saturday, July 20. (AP) The Soviet's hard note to Japan on July 1 protesting violation of its territory evoked an equally sharp reply today.

Foreign Minister Koki Hirota's note said that Manchoukuo's claim to the Delta island of Santyachow, at the confluence of the Amur and Assuri rivers, near Khabarovsk, remained unaltered.

URGES 'REGULATED INDIVIDUALISM'

LOS ANGELES, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—L. Ward Bannister, Denver reclamation expert, today advocated "regulated individualism" in a radio address in conjunction with the closing of the American Bar association's 55th annual convention.

Bannister, a convention delegate, condemning socialism and communism as twin evils and operation of resources and industry in private hands, but the control does not limit plant capacity, enlargement, prices, hours or wages.

'Queen Barbara' Wins Heart of Rodeo City

Santa Ana's Barbara Rowland, queen of the Salinas rodeo, has captivated the heart of that city. It was indicated today in a copy of the Salinas Index-Journal received here.

The story of Barbara's victory in competition with 42 other outdoor girls, was given the top banner headline on the newspaper's front page and contained a picture of her on her horse.

"It's too wonderful to believe," Barbara said breathlessly after Governor Frank Merriam had announced her triumph. Then she was overwhelmed with congratulations by congressmen, motion picture celebrities, cowhands and state officials, while thousands in the grandstands cheered.

Miss Rowland, with her father and mother, Mayor Fred C. Rowland and Mrs. Rowland are being feted throughout the rodeo. When they return here next week Barbara will be honored at a dinner and reception planned by the chamber of commerce here.

HILL'S WIFE NAMES WOMAN IN FIGHTING DIVORCE ACTION

Mrs. Mildred Richardson Hill plans a bitter resistance to efforts of her husband, Walter J. Hill, son of the late James J. Hill, former "empire builder," to divorce her, it was indicated when Mr. Hill was served late yesterday with a copy of his wife's cross-complaint in the divorce action.

The cross-complaint was served when Mr. Hill and his attorney, Charles Swanner, appeared before Superior Judge G. K. Scofield to show cause why Mrs. Hill should not receive $1250 monthly alimony pending trial of the divorce suit, $2500 attorney's fees and $1500 traveling expenses from Seattle, Wash., to Santa Ana. Mrs. Hill is represented by Attorney Fred Forgy.

Prior to the hearing on temporary alimony for Mrs. Hill, which was continued until Monday at 10 a. m., Mr. Forgy moved to have the complaint against the First Trust Company of St. Paul, named as co-defendant in the suit, set aside on the ground that the court lacks jurisdiction.

The trust company was named as holder of a trust fund created for Mrs. Hill by her husband who is now seeking to have it set aside. The motion to quash the proceeding was taken under advisement.

In her cross-complaint, Mrs. Hill accuses her husband of infidelity, naming Rene Saylor who, she alleges, Mr. Hill introduced as his wife on several occasions and on whom, she alleges, he spends large sums of money.

She also accuses her husband of extreme cruelty and cites several instances where he is accused of having beaten her severely.

According to the cross-complaint, Mrs. Hill was frequently embarrassed by her husband's actions when he was intoxicated. Probably the most embarrassing, according to the complaint, was the time at Livingston, Mont., when Mr. Hill rode a horse into the lobby of a hotel in which they were living. He not only rode the horse into the hotel, the complaint alleges, but attempted to take it into the elevator with him.

On another occasion, Mrs. Hill charges, her husband came home to the hotel, considerably under the influence of liquor, when she was absent. The door to the apartment was unlocked and Mr. Hill, states the complaint, declined to unlock it, preferring to break the door down.

Local representatives of the State Emergency Relief administration and the Works Progress administration were at San Diego today attending a conference at which it is hoped more complete information about the future of the two agencies will be developed.

Dan Mulhannon, Orange county director for the WPA, and Terrence Halloran, SERA administrator here, were the local officials who went to the southern city.

Mr. Mulhannon also will confer with George White, PWA administrator for this district, which includes Orange and San Diego counties. The WPA will be the agency carrying on construction projects in the work program financed by the $4,800,000 appropriation made by congress. In the future the SERA will be the relief agency.

MERRIAM HAS 372 BILLS ON DESK

SACRAMENTO, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—Still silent, Governor Merriam returned to the capitol today to pass final judgment on 372 bills, which will die at midnight by pocket veto unless his signature is written across them.

Adhering strictly to his policy of refusing to discuss in advance what action he would take on any measure, the governor met inquiries upon disposition of the controversial chain store tax, pari-mutuel dog racing, and gin marriage repeal acts without comment.

Refuses to Speak
While the governor refused to speak, no less than three state figures, all responsible officials close to the governor's office, predicted the chain store measure would be signed and the pari-mutuel dog racing and gin marriage repeal acts without comment.

Declining to be quoted, they said the governor was opposed to liberalizing either marriage or gambling laws and would sign the chain store tax because of the tremendous support brought out for it.

Another side of the political picture in back of the chain store measure was provided in a serious question existed whether the act was constitutional because of the exemption of gasoline service stations.

Referendum Seen
He also pointed out that whether the bill was signed or vetoed it probably would become the subject of a referendum.

The measure, sponsored by Assemblymen Cronin and McMurray, San Francisco, is expected to raise about $4,000,000 a biennium by imposing a tax ranging from $1 per store to $500 for the tenth store in a chain and each succeeding unit.

Cut-rate prices and massed buying power of chains are slowly throttling the small business man, proponents of the tax told the governor.

100 Bills Signed
A hundred new measures were written into California's statute books yesterday by the governor. He signed bills which will continue in force the criminal syndicalism provision in the school code. Under it a teacher suspected of advocating overthrow of the government may be suspended and her case put before the superior court.

The provision is but one of a number of others specifying grounds upon which a school board may move for the dismissal of a teacher and it was bitterly attacked in the legislature.

Ask Hearing
The code is revised, however, so that instead of immediate dismissal, the teacher may petition for a court hearing.

The Sharkey bill calling for a new registration of voters after January 1, 1936, also was signed as well as a measure which makes it unlawful for a manufacturer to require that a dealer finance his automobile sales through the agency designated by the factory.

Betting on horse races by telegraph was approved in another bill and a second Sharkey measure carries out a section of the ruling of an appellate court that a motorist cannot be convicted of exceeding the 45-mile speed limit if he can prove he was not driving recklessly, endangering life and property.

SHOTS RING OUT AGAIN IN BELFAST

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—Shots rang out in Belfast again today, causing a wild stampede among thousands of people taking part in a demonstration during the funeral procession for one of the week's seven rioting victims.

Intense excitement existed for a time but police, using their batons, quickly established order.

New York's famous Park avenue is not a street, but a bridge—at least, it lies over the route of a railroad line, which rumbles underneath.

MORE ABOUT OIL BILL

that a proper inquiry had not been made into the controversy.

Epic Heads Group
One of the committees is headed by Senator Culbert Olson, Los Angeles, Epic leader and strong opponent of the governor. Signing of the bill, it was said, would give the Epic democrats political ammunition for 1936 on the cry that the governor had played into the hands of major oil interests.

The Burns bill was drawn to permit the state surveyor general to lease tideland oil reservoirs of the state to producers for development by whipstock, or slantwise drilling from littoral lands, the developers to pay the state at least minimum royalties of 16 2/3 per cent. All of the littoral land at the rich Huntington Beach site is controlled by Standard Oil. Behind the measure lies one of the strangest stories of the petroleum industry, dating back to 1926.

Pools Discovered
It grew out of the discovery by geologists of six or seven rich littoral lands at Huntington Beach, Southern California coastline.

In 1927, oil producers who had been prohibited from capitalizing on these pools by a state law preventing despoliation of beaches by tideland drilling struck upon a new method of sinking wells.

By tilting the drilling table it was discovered that a well might be started at one point and "bottomed" at another point, in some instances 3000 to 5000 feet away and almost at right angles with the start of the hole.

Thus the rich tidelands at Huntington Beach were secretly tapped. Eventually word of the practice leaked out. State officials agreed to permit operations if producers paid the state back royalties and split with it on all future production.

Contracts were signed which netted the state about $850,000 in back royalties and which are expected to average a million dollars a year in current royalties. Only the contract with Standard was not signed.

Standard Owns Land
The cry of monopoly was raised because Standard owned all the littoral lands at Huntington Beach. It offered to pay the state about $480,000 in back royalties but state officials refused to accept this without the approval of the legislature. This has not been given.

Proponents of the Burns bill pointed out that Standard was not being handed a monopoly because it already possessed the littoral lands and if the legislation was not enacted, Standard, from vertical wells might continue to drain the tideland pool. Under the bill, off-set wells could be drilled so that the state could take barrel for barrel from the pool with Standard.

Standard has granted easements to 80 wells across its property so that the tideland pool might be tapped.

A drive by independents to force the legislature to put the lease awards in the Burns bill on a competitive bidding basis was defeated after oil experts had argued that a producer could only stand so much royalty and that bidding the price up would only wreck the objective of the bill.

Independents contended that the state might, under competitive bidding, obtain royalties as high as 60 per cent.

WEST WIRES VETO PLEA TO GOVERNOR

Supervisor N. E. West of Laguna Beach, who has favored an island drilling program for exploitation of the tideland oil, sent a telegram yesterday to Governor Merriam urging him to veto the Burns bill.

"Those urging your signature to assembly bill 1684 are doing so through misinformation or purely selfish interests," the message said. "Public rights demand this great natural resource be developed to the utmost benefit of the people. Sixteen eighty four prevents this. I have offered a practical plan to save this wealth for the people and the beaches also. Your veto is urged in behalf of honest public policy and to give time to find the best plan for developing this state owned oil field."

Mr. West said in an interview that he believes the governor will sign the bill, but hopes "he will have the moral courage to veto it."

Has Three Plans
He pointed out that he has suggested three plans for developing the field without raising the question of beach pollution.

"It is only fair to the public that the legislature investigating committee should have time to determine the best and most practical plan for developing this oil." Mr. West's plans include condemnation of street ends abutting on Coast boulevard and using these locations as drilling sites. Next, whipstocked off-set wells, building of bulkheads into the ocean, from which wells could be drilled, and building of a breakwater behind which dredged material could be filled in to form the base of drilling operations.

MORE ABOUT ETHIOPIA

less record of never having been conquered."

Later the Italian minister, Count Vinci, protested vigorously to the foreign office against "the bitter tone of the attacks on Italy" contained in the emperor's speech before parliament Thursday.

The new patriotic association, "Amour Pour la Patrie," was attracting thousands of Ethiopians who streamed into the capitol to join with their emperor in their readiness to lay down all for the nation's "sacred" independence.

High-ranking army officers, dignitaries of the coptic Christian church and other leaders are among the organizers.

Even semi-independent tribal chieftains, holding domains on the far-flung highlands, summoned councils of war. Their action was taken as an indication they intend to stand with the emperor in defense of Ethiopia.

PLAYWRIGHT DEFENDS ITALY'S POLICY

NEW YORK, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—Luigi Pirandello, Italian playwright and Nobel prize winner, today declared that Italy is entering Ethiopia as England entered America when it was the land of the Indians.

"It is the right of a modern state to civilize a barbaric nation," he added.

Landing from the Conte di Savoia on his first trip to America in 11 years, Pirandello met with a host of questions regarding possible war between his homeland and the domain of Emperor Haile Selassie.

As newsmen boarded the boat they were handed a typewritten statement which said:

"First of all the Italian people are following their Duke with absolute unanimity in their determination to solve this problem once for all. For more than 50 years Italy has consistently tried to open to civilization the closed feudal world of the Ethiopian highland."

JAPAN DRAWN INTO AFRICAN CONTROVERSY

By the Associated Press
Japan was drawn into the Italo-Ethiopian situation today as Italy went ahead with warlike preparations and Emperor Haile Selassie at Addis Ababa declared his empire would "defend its territory to the last man."

The Italian embassy visited the foreign office to complain that the Japanese press was hostile to Italy.

Elgi Amai, chief of the foreign office publicity bureau, replied with a similar accusation against the Italian newspapers.

At Rome it was indicated the foreign office viewed the situation with increasing seriousness in view of the "hostility" toward Italy of Emperor Haile Selassie's speech last Thursday. More troops were forwarded to East Africa today and nearly a thousand regular army officers were given wartime promotions.

U. S. MUNITIONS FIRM WATCHED BY SENATE

WASHINGTON, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—Twenty agents of the senate's munitions investigation have been ordered to keep a sharp eye out for any sign that American arms manufacturers are doing business with Italy or Ethiopia.

Asked for his opinion of the Italo-Ethiopian situation, Chairman Nye said: "I am afraid of it. It looks like a bonfire that will lead to a disastrous conflagration. I am awfully afraid we will see 1914-1918 all over again."

Meet Your Neighbor

The Journal's compilation of "Orange County People You Should Know."

Name:
Edward W. Cochems.

Occupation:
Photographer.

When and where were you born?
Chicago, Ill.

What has been the most interesting event of your life to date?
The day that my father announced that his family was moving to California.

What career would you recommend for a young man starting out for himself today?

I would advise him to follow along the lines of scientific research and of writing.

What is your favorite department in The Journal?

There are so many extremely good features in The Journal that I am unable to choose any particular department as being my favorite.

What should be the United States government's next major step?

The government should take steps to make profiteering impossible. They should eliminate the possibility of any person or group taking advantage of situations which are created by such emergencies as war or unforeseen catastrophes.

What one thing does Santa Ana need most?
A municipal park, supported by the city.

How can Orange county be improved?
By further making our county the mecca that embraces all the needs and desires of man. By making it the one ideal place to live.

One-sentence interview:
At one time, Santa Ana was second to none in its cultural accomplishments, especially in music. Why can't we take steps to regain that old standing?

"My experiences in Japan" will be the subject of a talk by Delmar Brown when he takes the pulpit of the First Methodist church tomorrow morning at 9:20 o'clock.

Teacher in a Japanese university for three years, Mr. Brown is to return for another three-year period early in August. He is a member of the First Methodist church here and was active in church work before he left for Japan. He is a graduate of Stanford and is taking his high school diploma from Santa Ana.

Mrs. George Warner will present a solo to augment the program.

GUEST PASTORS

Two guest pastors have been secured for morning addresses at Santa Ana churches tomorrow.

$40,000 PLAN FOR CITY HALL IS PRESENTED TO FULLERTON COUNCIL

APPROVAL OF WORK NOT GIVEN

Planning Commission To Act Before Council Will Back Plan

FULLERTON. — Plans for the proposed new $40,000 city hall for Fullerton were discussed at an adjourned meeting of the city council yesterday, with members holding up approval of the plans until they have been certified by the planning commission.

The plans presented yesterday were for an "L" shaped structure having 8600 square feet of floor space and a basement under a portion of the building. Two styles of architecture were offered councilmen by G. Stanley Wilson, the architect, one of Spanish and the other of Moorish design.

Total cost of the building was estimated by Mr. Wilson at $39,800, not including furnishings. Included in plans are a draughting room, engineer, street and water departments, city clerk's offices, additions to the jail, chief of police and sergeant's offices and the health department in one wing.

The council chamber, judge's office and mayor's office occupy the other wing, according to the plan, with a large paved terrace facing on West Whiting avenue.

Plan Changes

Changes will probably be made by the council and planning commission, as the basement arrangement was not approved by heads of city departments. More storage space for city records was recommended by them and will probably be placed directly under the city clerk's office and water and engineering departments.

The council will meet again at 10:30 Monday to discuss approval of the plan. City Engineer Herman Hiltcher urged that the civic body act as soon as possible in order that an application may be made to federal authorities for assistance in construction of the building.

Park Work Approved

Revised plans for a fountain in Hillcrest park and certain park improvements were approved by the council subject to approval by the planning commission. Total cost of the project was lowered to $15,000 from the former figure of $20,000 in the plan presented by Engineer Hiltcher.

Final reading of a new dog license ordinance was heard. The new ordinance sets the rate at $1 for males and $3 for females. That two new police cars will be purchased soon was indicated when the police commission was given power to act on the purchase. The same commission was also given power to act on purchase of two new police radios.

No action was taken on a request from the California League of Municipalities for $75 to aid in hiring valuation experts to appear before the state board of equalization soon regarding property valuations.

CAMP SUPERINTENDENT TELLS PROCESS OF MAKING ADOBE

SAN CLEMENTE. — Construction work being done on the San Clemente and Doheny state parks by CCC camp workers has caused much comment by visitors to the two spots now being improved under direction of Robert C. Conner, superintendent.

Most noticeable among improvements is building of adobe walls and gates at camp entrances and around the CCC camp at San Clemente. Plans are also being considered for construction of an administration building and rest rooms at the parks, using adobe.

Men of the camp make their own adobe brick for use in the walls. Mr. Conner, in charge of the work, tells of the method of making adobe bricks in the following article:

"While every permanent material of which houses are built may have written its own romance down through the ages, it is doubtful if any can lay claim to a more romantic past than the very simple sun-baked mud brick commonly known as adobe, or as the Mexicans still call it, the adobero.

Used for Churches

"Humble beyond words, this crude, strong earthen block once played a highly significant part in the rearing of a Christian civilization on the Pacific slope. Moulded by the hands of devout Indian workmen, it became the chief support for the walls of the historic chain of California missions erected by Fra Junipero Serra and his band of holy men, as well as for the enclosure and shelter of early rambling haciendas.

"The first consideration in the fabrication of a satisfactory adobe brick is the selection of a suitable material.

"All top soil containing organic matter should be cast aside as unfit for use. The character of the soil has much to do with the strength and general serviceability of adobe bricks. As a matter of fact, a wide variety of soils, except very light sandy soils and very heavy clay soils, may be used for construction purposes.

"The name 'Adobe' is applied to all sun dried clay bricks in the Southwest, hence it does not necessarily mean that the material used has to be the real adobe clay. Any clay that hardens in the sun to stand a compression to exceed three hundred and fifty pounds to the square inch, and does not check or crack too badly in the process of drying is suitable.

Tells Materials

"The materials used on this project are a mixture of red and black adobe. In order to assure a minimum of cracking it is necessary to add about 20 per cent sand. The clay mixed with the sand is soaked in pits for approximately three days. From the pits the mud is put into mixing boxes and approximately ten per cent straw is mixed into the mud with regular concrete mixing hoes. The entire mixture, is then worked until the texture is reasonably smooth. It is then placed in moulds.

"The moulded brick are covered with straw and allowed to dry with this covering from four to six days, contingent upon weather conditions. As soon as the brick are fairly solid, the straw is removed. In about ten days they are ready to be ricked either in the yard stock pile or at the project for which they were made, still on edge. Ample air space must be left to prevent sweating else they become soft again by absorbing moisture.

Use Mud as Mortar

"Adobe bricks are laid in the wall in much the same manner as ordinary burnt brick, care being taken to break joints and to build up strong well bonded corners. Generally mud without straw is used for mortar, and the bricks are laid with one-half to one inch joints.

"The proposed and approved projects in San Clemente and Doheny Beach State parks are in keeping with the traditions of early California. It is of more permanent type than that of the Padres and Indians in that it takes advantage of the use of steel, concrete, metals and other ingredients which are now available and tend to resist destruction and disintegration."

WESTMINSTER. — More than 700,000 little goldfish will soon be swimming contentedly in new homes. Their new homes will cost the Pacific Goldfish farm of Westminster exactly $15,000 and are located on a 40-acre tract at the corner of Goldenwest avenue and Bolsa road.

Within a week the project will be entirely completed. It includes setting out of 125 separate pools all under protection of 15 acres of heavy wire and construction of hothouses for various species of tropical aquatic plants and fishes. Storage, breeding and propagation of both plants and fish are to be carried on.

This new acreage expands the Pacific Goldfish Farm to twice its original capacity, and makes it the largest of its kind in the west. The main offices and farm are located just west of this city on Westminster boulevard. The new 40-acre plot was leased from Clifford Cole.

Youngsters Have Own Paper On Lido Isle

NEWPORT BEACH. — The four youngsters who print the "Lido Lookout" think that their paper is the finest published on Lido Isle. Of course, theirs is the only paper printed on the island, but it is still a good one, they contend.

BALBOA BEACH. — Sudden appearance of a huge, double-masted pirate ship on the strand at Balboa Beach is fair warning that swagging buccaneers of the Spanish main really mean business. Business men and residents of the harbor district have received several ominous notes this week warning of the pirate attack and sacking of the city next Friday. If treated with due respect, they will leave Sunday night, the messages stated. They were signed with the typical skull and crossbones of Captain Kid. Frightened into submission by these strategic moves, civic leaders have organized committees under the direction of the junior chamber of commerce to cope with the problem.

Miss Ruth White has been selected to reign as queen during the three-day orgy. Prizes for the best pirate costume and bathing ensemble will be given at the fashion parade 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Everyone will be in costume as the pirate band has threatened to make all others walk the plank into the bay for albacore bait.

A treasure hunt on the beach Sunday morning and a gala ball in the Rendezvous Saturday night are other outstanding features of the festivities.

Many former featured players in the days of silent films are now scenarists or producers.

WILL SPEND $3500 ON SCHOOL

Tentative Approval For Orange Project Told By Principal

ORANGE. — A. Haven Smith, principal of the local high school, announced tentative approval by WPA of an amount of $3500 to be spent on painting projects at the school. The school district will be required to pay $800, with the WPA providing the balance.

Exterior painting will be done on the commercial and science buildings, with interior painting in the chemistry rooms, gymnasium and academic building.

The school also suggested raising of all walks around the campus to prevent flooding in wet weather, waterproofing the basement of the auditorium building, building two tennis courts, raising of the old dressing rooms and construction office on the athletic field, and leveling of the same. Doors to replace curtains will probably be installed in the girls' dressing rooms in the gymnasium.

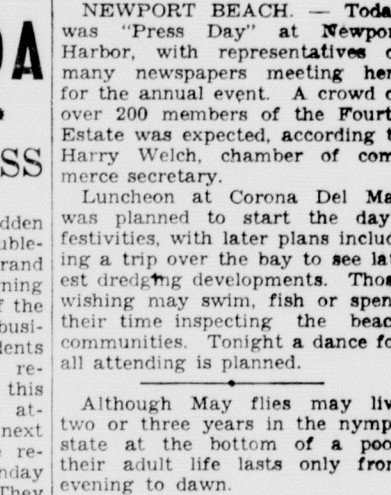

NEWSPAPERMEN ARE VISITORS AT NEWPORT HARBOR

NEWPORT BEACH. — Today was "Press Day" at Newport Harbor, with representatives of many newspapers meeting here for the annual event. A crowd of over 200 members of the Fourth Estate was expected, according to Harry Welch, chamber of commerce secretary.

Although May flies may live two or three years in the nymph state at the bottom of a pool, their adult life lasts only from evening to dawn.

'BECKY SHARP' COMING SUNDAY

FULL COLOR FEATURE AT BROADWAY

Miriam Hopkins Stars in Picture Based on 'Vanity Fair'

Inaugurating what many believe to be a new era in screen entertainment, a full color feature, "Becky Sharp," will open an engagement of four days at the Broadway theater tomorrow.

Based upon William Makepeace Thackeray's famous classic, "Vanity Fair," the new picture stars Miriam Hopkins. The film is produced entirely in the new three-component technicolor, promising a revelation in beauty, fidelity to life and clarity.

Above and beyond the technical triumph of the coloring, "Becky Sharp" offers an absorbing, perfectly executed drama, rich in striking characterizations and entertainment values. As fiction's immortal coquette, the blonde and lovely Miss Hopkins has a role demanding both sparkling humor and tense emotion. She is supported by Frances Dee, Cedric Hardwicke, Billie Burke, Alison Skipworth, Nigel Bruce, Alan Mowbray, G. R. Huntley, Jr., Colin Tapley, William Faversham and other notable players.

True to the novel in treatment, period and locale, the picture deals with the London of the early 19th century, and traces the meteoric career of a clever beauty who uses her wits and loveliness to conquer the hearts of men and to overcome social barriers. Selected short subjects on the program include a musical, "A Night at the Biltmore Bowl," with Jimmy Grier and his band; "Lowell Thomson Travelogue," "Going Places," a Krazy Kat cartoon, "Garden Gaities," and World News events.

'CALL OF WILD' STARRING GABLE

Jack London's immortal story of the Yukon gold rush, now made into a thrilling film, will show at the Broadway theater for four days starting on Sunday, July 28, when "Call of the Wild," with Clark Gable, Jack Oakie and Loretta Young, opens here. Manager Lester J. Fountain announces.

Gable takes the part of Jack Thornton, the swash-buckling prospector. Miss Young, as a San Francisco socialite, comes into his life. Thrown together on the trail, they begin by hating each other, but under the spell of the Arctic their differences diminish, and a romance ensues.

BOYER STAR IN ORIENT FILM

Two stars who have appeared in several of the past season's most popular pictures are featured together in "Shanghai," drama of the Orient, which will open at the West Coast theater next Friday, with a second feature, "Calm Yourself," a satire on the advertising racket, states Manager Lester J. Fountain.

Charles Boyer, seen in "Carnegie," "Private Worlds," and "Break of Hearts," is teamed in "Shanghai" with Loretta Young, who scored successes in "Rothschild's Child," "White Parade," and the new picture just released, "Call of the Wild."

The scene of "Shanghai" is laid in the Shanghai International settlement and interior China. It is a story of a love beyond ordinary understanding, telling of the great infatuation of a white girl for the half-caste son of an exiled Russian nobleman and a Manchurian princess. The cast includes Warner Oland, Allison Skipworth, Fred Keating, Hedda Hopper, Charles Grapewin, Walter Kingsford, Willie Fung and Keye Luke.

Robert Young and Madge Evans are teamed in "Calm Yourself," comedy-drama that deals with the exploits of a young advertising man who, bounced out of his father's business, starts a "confidential service" agency which promises to handle any chore for the subscriber. "Going Highbrow" is based on the hilarious play by Ralph Spence and concerns the wife of a Kansas farmer, suddenly become rich, who hires herself a publicity man, and adopts a waitress as a daughter, to launch herself into New York's socially elite. Roosevelt Follows Father's Trail on Jaguar Hunt in Brazil Jungle

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP)—After a score of years another "Teddy" Roosevelt stalks his quarry in Brazil's "green hell."

Twenty-one years after his famous father, Col. Theodore Roosevelt has gone into the marshes of the Matto Grosso jungle to hunt jaguars.

To the northwest of the marshes, some 300 miles from Cuyaba, capital of Matto Grosso, begins a river discovered by the Bull Moose leader in 1914.

Hunts Between Rivers Roosevelt river plunges down the sides of the Parecis mountains and rolls 730 miles northward to join the Madeira in its race to the Amazon.

To the northwest of the marshland, near Cuyaba, runs the Kolueno, one of the tributary prongs of the great Xingu river and the stream up which sailed Col. P. T. Lawrence nine years ago, never to return.

Colonel Roosevelt is confining his hunt for jaguars to a region just south and west of Cuyaba, marked off roughly by the Sao Lourenco river, south, and the Paraguay river west.

With him is Sasha Siemel, prototype of the hero of "Tiger Man" and "Green Hell," books about a quiet, sinewy European soldiering a blighted romance by the dangers of the jungle hunt.

Kills 'Em With Spear Siemel has lived in Matto Grosso 20 years. A Lithuanian, he has learned the native's art of holding a lance point fixedly near the eyes of a jaguar, then transfixing the cornered beast. He has bagged scores of the big cats by this method.

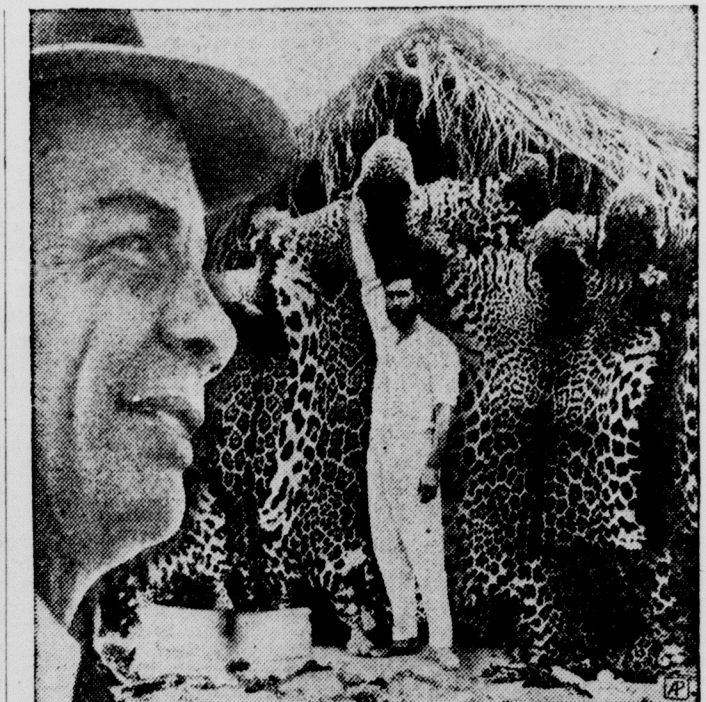

The stark truth about the hunting grounds seems fictional. It is mostly land flooded by the Paraguay six months in the year. Baths must be taken in the company of a multitude of tropical fish, some more than four feet long.

Gaping "jacaras," the Brazilian crocodiles, must be guarded against. Not always man-eating, they all take big bites.

Tall, very trees block passages. Amidst luxuriant and persistent vegetation the jaguar must be found, cornered and fought.

He Mapped 'Teddy's' Trip Col. Roosevelt was met here when he arrived on a plane, by a bent old man who recalled the elder Roosevelt vividly.

With tears in his eyes, Jose Custodio Alves de Almeida clasped the colonel in his arms and said: "I knew his father well! I was

JANE WITHERS, CHILD STAR, IN PICTURE NOW AT WEST COAST

Jane Withers, the kid who imitated a machine gun, told tales on Shirley Temple, tried to run her down with a doll carriage and proved herself a complete annoyance in "Bright Eyes," has the title role in the new film, "Ginger," now showing at the West Coast theater with a second feature, "The Arizonian," starring Richard Dix.

"Dix, in 'The Arizonian,' is seen as a fighting marshal who strives to rid the country of outlaws. The English star, Margot Graham, Preston Foster, Louis Calhern and James Bush are in the cast.

With Jane Withers in "Ginger," is Jackie Searle, native son of Anaheim and former resident of Fullerton.

Short subjects on the program include a color cartoon, "The Rag Dog," and World News events.

BARKLESS DOGS---MAYBE! Psychiatrist Considers It

NEW YORK, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—In the interests of good sound sleep, Dr. Clarence D. Cheney is considering the development of barkless dogs.

Dr. Cheney, director of the New York State Psychiatric Institute, appeared in court to answer a charge of maintaining a public nuisance. Doris Karp, who lives near the institute, complained that the dogs kept by the institute for research purpose barked long and loudly through the night. Consequently, she was way behind on her sleep, she said.

"Is that how you get your business—by driving people crazy?" asked Magistrate Frank Oliver.

Dr. Cheney did not reply to this question, but said the institute was contemplating several moves to remedy the situation, one of them making dogs barkless through operations on their vocal chords.

HIS ARRIVAL

By Mary Graham Bonner The car which held Rip was bumping up Puddle Muddle's bad roads. And every Puddle Muddle was there to greet Rip.

"It's really you, it's really you," cried Mrs. Quacko Duck, and borrowed Mr. Quacko's large leaf handkerchief to wipe the happy tears from her eyes.

"Rip, Rip, we've thought you'd never come," growled Jelly and Honey Bear, and the cubs Jupiter and Elackey. Their eyes were misty and it seemed as though even their strong, big bodies could not hold all the happiness they felt. Top Notch was cackling:

"Cock-a-doodle-do, Oh Rip it's you!"

Christopher had flown down by the side of the automobile. His eyes did not look rough as so often they did. They just stared and stared at Rip as though he never wanted to let the dog out of sight again.

But Willy Nilly had lifted Rip out of the car. He could not speak. He just held his dog close and thought he would never let him go from his arms again.

He put his face down on Rip's head, he rubbed his face against Rip's silky ears and Rip licked his hands, his face, saying:

"Willy Nilly, Willy Nilly, I couldn't have kept up if it hadn't been for the thought of you."

"And you've saved me." Now Willy Nilly remembered that an automobile was standing here with a man and a boy inside. "Where did you find him? How can I thank you? You must have the reward?" Willy Nilly asked question after question.

KIGHT SCORES TRIBE LEADING AT TANK MEET OVER ANGELS

NEW YORK, Saturday, July 20. (AP)—One chunky young lady from Homestead, Pa., 22-year-old Lenore Kight, stood out today as the surest bet Uncle Sam has for the women's distance swimming event in the 1936 Olympics.

Titleholders have been failing in the national championships in the big outdoor pool at Manhattan Beach, and titles have been claimed on none too impressive performances, but Miss Kight, short, powerful, serious, seems certain to duplicate her sensational performance of 1934, when she won three free-style distance titles.

Already Miss Kight has won the mile and the 40-yard free-style, breaking her own previous records in both, averaging one new record for each day of the meet so far. She clipped about 13 seconds off the mile mark, and yesterday, featuring the second day of the championships, set of which he to set a new American standard of 5 minutes, 32.5 seconds for the quarter, 11 seconds better than her old record.

By the Associated Press The game of tag Los Angeles and Seattle have been playing for weeks still is going on, with the Angels "it" today.

The Tribe again emerged a half game ahead by defeating Hollywood last night while the Angels were splitting a doubleheader with Oakland to drop back into fourth place.

George Lefty Darrow, recruit from Baltimore, won his first start for the Angels 4-3 as he set the Angels down with eight hits in the opener. He outpitched another youngster, "Chile" Talamante, who was jerked in the sixth.

J. Millard Campbell, who relieved Talamante in the first contest, came back in the same role in the seventh inning nightcap to save the day for Newell Kimball. A couple of Oakland errors by Emil Mailho helped him chalk up a 4-3 win.

Art Herring, Sacramento fast ball finger, struck out 13 Missions and pitched his club to a 3-hit shutout 6-0. All but two of the Red batters who faced him struck out at least once.

Dick Barrett, Seattle mound ace who was knocked out of the box by Hollywood Tuesday, got revenge as he downed Ed Wells in a pitching duel to give the Indians a 3-2 win over the Stars. The victory evened the series at two games each.

Joe Di Maggio got two hits and boosted his consecutive streak to 26 games, as San Francisco defeated Portland 5-1. Both hits were singles, but one brought in a run and he stole a base.

Feeling Well Today?

By DR. IAGO GALDSTON

A Disease That Obliterates Arteries

The formidable "thromboangitis obliterans" names a distressing disease whose synonyms are endarteritis obliterans or Buerger's disease.

This is a condition in which the calibre of the arteries, notably in the extremities, become narrowed. The disease progresses until the arteries are obliterated, and blood circulation is inadequate to maintain the life of the tissues.

Gangrene or local death of the tissue results, necessitating amputation of the affected parts.

19 Operations

Recently it was reported that a certain patient had had 19 operations in the last 15 years and had successfully lost all four extremities. Erroneously it was said that medical men do not know of any one having recovered from this condition. As it was reported that the only pleasure in life left this man was smoking.

Now, it is not a fact that thromboangitis obliterans is a hopeless condition. Hundreds of cases of this disease have been treated suc-

Talks to Parents

By Brooke Peters Church

MOLDING THE CHILD

"It's such fun to plan the kind of adult you want your child to be, and begin to train him and watch him develop along those lines."

Of course the speaker was a very young mother talking about her first baby. The older women in the group merely smiled knowingly and made no comment. Most of them knew too well that time alone would show the younger one how idle her words were.

Can Be Done

Of course it can be done to some extent—this molding children to a preconceived pattern. But the results are apt to be unfortunate. There is a way of training trees to grow in planned shapes, but the finished product is warped and unnatural. Trees grow best when allowed to develop freely along nature's plan. True, they must be kept from pruning and sprayed and fed and pruned and interfered with other growing things. But the wise forester will not tamper with their essential form and habits.

Babies are not like white sheets of paper waiting for someone to write out his dreams and ambitions. Parents cannot expect to realize in their youngsters the unfulfilled ideals of their youth.

Has Mind Made Up

Perhaps Mrs. C. had longed to be a musician, but for some reason had failed to realize her ambition. She determines that her child shall be a musician instead, and from the moment of his conception fixes her mind on the fulfillment of her dream. She is almost surely doomed to disappointment.

The child is a new entity, and the wise mother accepts this fact and as far as possible allows him to develop on his own lines. She feeds him, shelters him, and teaches him to live with others and let others live. For the rest she keeps hands off while he fulfills his own destiny.

LEACH CALLS
GUARDSMEN
FINE UNIT

SAN LUIS OBISPO, Saturday, July 20. (P)—The national guard, in the opinion of Major General George E. Leach, chief of the national guard bureau in Washington, is "potentially the greatest combative military unit in the world."

Those words were used here today by General Leach, most recent "Caterpillar Club" member by virtue of his leap earlier this week from a flaming plane over Arizona, after he reviewed the 40th National Guard division, assembled from Utah, Nevada and California.

"Greatest in World"
"This unit," the general declared, "appears to me to be every bit as good as any of the fine California troops that came back after November 11, 1918."

"As a matter of fact, that national guard division in my opinion is potentially the greatest combative unit in the world today and could defeat any opponent. This is not just propaganda; I am convinced of this."

General Leach, on a nationwide inspection tour, said he was extremely impressed with the work of the division in demonstrating the possibility of rapid transit of field artillery and other motorized units.

Calls Cost Cheap
"The motorization of guard units, eliminating the old horse drawn equipment," he said, "has increased the mobility of the guard to such an extent that the 18 divisions can be assembled on any coast or border in 10 days, as compared with the three months taken when it was moved to Texas for the Mexican expeditionary campaign."

"And this motorization has taken place at an actual saving in money. As a matter of fact, the national guard, with its 190,000 troops costs the individual taxpayer no more than the expense of one movie theater ticket a year."

"No other armed force in any country in the world is so cheaply maintained."

LAND CASE NEW TRIAL DENIED

Following arguments on behalf of the state of California, as intervenor, and Matilda Shallenmiller, one of the defendants, Superior Judge H. G. Ames late yesterday denied a motion for a new trial in the Bolsa Land company action against Vaqueros Oil company, Thomas A. Berry, Charles H. Jones and Mrs. Shallenmiller. The land company sued, and after five years, secured an injunction restraining the oil company from using the plaintiff's property for storage of oil well machinery. Litigation was started more than five years ago when the land company petitioned for an injunction alleging that the Vaqueros Oil company was using property abutting the state-owned tidelands and owned by the plaintiff organization, for tidelands drilling operations. The oil company was working under a tidelands prospecting permit issued to Mrs. Shallenmiller by the state in 1929.

Last May, Judge Ames, in a decision rendered after hearing evidence submitted over a five-year period, established the average high water mark, held to be a boundary of the Bolsa Land company property, enjoined the oil company from trespassing further on the drilling equipment and machinery from the plaintiff company's property.

3 MORATORIUM
SUITS BEGUN

Relief under the mortgage act of 1935 is sought by three distressed property owners in four suits started in superior court today.

Louis Henning, in two suits naming Grace H. Mills as defendant, is seeking postponement of foreclosure on two adjoining ranches. One piece of property, according to the complaint, was mortgaged to secure a loan of $17,000, and the other was mortgaged to secure a $12,000 loan.

J. L. Sharar has started suit against the First National Bank of Orange for postponement of sale of property under a trust deed foreclosure. A trust deed on the property was given to secure a loan, the amount of which was unstated.

Relief is sought by D. F. Lehmert in an action naming Scott and Borden, Inc., as defendants. Mr. Lehmert is seeking to halt foreclosure of ranch property mortgaged to secure a $11,000 loan.

FOUR TENNIS COURTS WILL BE LIGHTED

Santa Ana will soon have four well-lighted tennis courts. This was made known at a meeting last night of the board of education after plans for lighting the courts at both junior high schools were presented by George De Rouillac, a representative of the Santa Ana Tennis club, and E. B. Kruger, Los Angeles electrical engineer.

Mr. De Rouillac pointed out several advantages of tennis being played at night. Not only is it cooler then, he said, but it will in a measure help keep younger people occupied during the evening.

Present plans include installation of a meter, and lights will be available on the courts for approximately 45 minutes at a time after 25 cents is deposited in the meter. It is expected sufficient revenue will be realized from the meters to make the courts self-supporting.

Estimates presented to the board revealed that the courts can be lighted for a total cost of $1224. The Tennis club already has accumulated $165 for assisting in installation of lights, and last night offered this sum to the board to be used as it sees fit.

Fred Newcom, secretary of the board, was instructed to advertise for bids for the work. Plans and specifications for the projects will be presented at the meeting of the board next Tuesday.

PREPARING FOR BIG OIL SUIT

LOS ANGELES, Saturday, July 20. (P)—A court battle through which the federal government hopes to recover oil land holdings of the Standard Oil Company of California and the General Petroleum company, involving sums estimated at between $25,000,000 and $50,000,000, loomed here today.

Mapping out details of the case were United States Attorney Peterson M. Hall and Associate Judge John W. Preston of the state supreme court. The latter expects to resign his present post to act as special government counsel in the case.

Not only will the government seek recovery of two sections of land in the naval reserve in Elk Hills field, Kern county, but will seek an accounting from the Standard Oil concern for oil and gas extracted from that company's disputed section, which the government estimates will run upwards of $25,000,000.

Justice Preston said the suits will be filed on the grounds that the land was granted by the federal government to the state in 1853, and then passed into private ownership, but because of conditions in the grant the title to the land never passed.

LOS ANGELES, Saturday, July 20. (P)—Penniless and weary, Mrs. Bessie Sausser, middle-aged widow, sat down and wrote a note to Mrs. Maude Denton, her landlady.

"Dear Mrs. Denton: In my hand is a dollar. Please use it to pay for the gas I have wasted."

The woman's body was found later in her gas-filled room.

George. On the same boat was Mary Brian, movie actress, who will appear in a London revue as her first stage venture.

MASONIC YOUTHS PLAN PICNIC AT PARK JULY 30

Santa Ana Job's Daughters and De Molay will picnic and dance Tuesday evening, July 30, at Irvine park. An orchestra will play for dancing.

The Friday night dance committee headed by Lorraine Wheeler and Morris Lyan has charge of picnic arrangements.

Complete with comics, an editorial page, a march of events column, a "dirt" department as well as all the news of troop activities, three young Boy Scouts from Troop 24, sponsored by the Rotary club, issue a weekly newspaper for the edification of the "gang." It's called "El Explorador."

Although they use an hectograph for a press, the staff members got their inspiration from The Journal as all three—Editor Richard Wright, Business Manager George Dawson and Circulation Manager Bill Druitt—are employees of The Journal circulation department.

The current edition carries the banner: "Rokili to be invaded by Troop 24," and gives the details of the group's planned trip to the San Bernardino mountains camp of the county scout council.

Although expenses have been cut to a minimum—even to laying off the staff cartoonist—and "lifting" their comics from other publications—the Explorador can't be given away. An editorial notice declares: "This paper will have to charge a fee of 1 cent per copy until the depression ends."

Stockholders Likely To Pay For $700,000 Drive
Against Utility Bill

WASHINGTON, Saturday, July 20. (P)—Senate lobby investigators, who have hardly made a dent in their $50,000 expense fund, said today they would delve into activities against the administration's new tax bill and other New Deal measures.

Chairman Black (d. Ala.) announced, however, that for the time being they would stick to the trail of lobbying against the Roosevelt utility bill. In fighting this bill, the lobby committee was told, the Associated Gas and Electric company spent $700,000, more than $100,000 on telegraphic protests to members of congress.

Consumers to Pay
Yesterday the investigators, questioning an attorney for A. G. E., drew admissions that A. G. E. stockholders or consumers eventually would bear the expense of the fight.

The committee will resume its inquiry next week.

Mr. Black said Senator Hastings (r. Del.) had turned over to him for inspection a series of form letters he had received protesting against the Roosevelt tax measure. Black added he would investigate the source of the protests.

Suspect Higher-ups
Reviewing the committee testimony thus far, Mr. Black said he was satisfied, but probably could not develop it, that persons "higher up" than U. E. Beach, of Ithaca, N. Y., manager of the securities department of A. G. E., ordered the destruction of the utility bill campaign records in 26 states when the senate investigation was announced.

Beach told the committee yesterday he ordered the records destroyed in 60 or 70 branch offices over the country "on my own responsibility." He added, however, he had informed his immediate superior, O. E. Wassner, comptroller of A. G. E., that he was going to issue the orders and Wassner "didn't say no and didn't say yes."

Midsummer Festivities Attract Hundreds to Santa Ana Country Clubhouse

Tournament Followed By Barbecue

Mexican Orchestra Plays For Dancing Through Evening Hours

Nearly 300 members and guests of the Santa Ana Country club thronged the clubhouse for yesterday's gala day activities, which opened early in the afternoon with an 18-hole Jack'n Jill tournament, followed by a Spanish barbecue dinner on the golf course just outside the clubhouse, and brought to a grand climax by dancing to the music of an excellent nine-piece Spanish orchestra.

The party was significant in that it marked the beginning of a new social program for the club, and will be followed by a series of gay social affairs, according to club plans.

In the tournament, winners were Mrs. B. W. McClure and C. V. Davis, 35-16-69; Mrs. Paul Hall and L. J. Bushard, 84-15-69; Mrs. B. W. McClure and E. E. Farnsworth, 84-12-71; and Mrs. L. J. Bushard and C. H. Guthrie, 88-17-71.

Buffet style, the crowd then was served with barbecued beef, Spanish beans, enchiladas, salad and coffee, and sat at long tables under an arc light. The orchestra played such popular songs as "La Cucaracha" and "Rio Grande" in the dinner hour.

Summer informality was evidenced in the cool white and figured crepe and knit sports frocks chosen by the clubwomen. Mr. and Mrs. B. J. MacMullen were general chairmen for the evening.

Summer Brings "I Do's" For Three

July rather than June is the choice of one pretty Santa Ana girl, pictured above. The other two have chosen an August date for their wedding bells.

Mrs. Palmer Stoddard (Maxine Decker), daughter of Mrs. Mildred Decker of 1233 South Broadway, was married Monday evening in the home of her mother, and she and her husband are among the very latest additions to Santa Ana's home circles.

Miss Margaret Finley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Finley of Newport road, is to be married Aug. 3 in Santa Ana to Floyd Blower, son of Mrs. Mary Blower of Pointsettia street, and she is providing an incentive for a series of gay parties being given by her friends.

Miss Anne Hart, daughter of Mrs. Frances Hart, 1815 Valencia street, announced at a recent party in Miss Margaret Esau's home, Santa Ana, that she will be married Aug. 30 in Washington, D. C., to H. Nelson Spotswood of the capital city. Miss Hart is a talented young artist.

Girl Deceived By Married Man Will Only Lose By Revealing His Infidelity to Wife

By MARY STODDARD

A young woman has wasted eight precious years of her life for a very shabby reason: She has permitted a married man to deceive her into believing that he was separated from his wife and that a divorce was in the offing. His wife is still with him. Now she wants revenge and has planned it in the form of "letting his wife in on the big secret."

If the truth were known, his wife probably knows much more than the girl imagines. To publicize the affair would only cheapen her more and probably not affect the husband, or his wife, either, to any extent.

REV. H. B. LANDIS IS FETTERED AT PARTY

Surprising the Rev. Herman B. Landis on his birthday, members of the Christian Endeavor society assembled at his home, following a C. E. executive board meeting Thursday evening.

An informal program was enjoyed and refreshments were served.

rest of ingredients. Press into greased loaf pan and chill overnight. Cut off thin slices and bake 10 minutes in moderate oven.

She has played the clown part in this little drama of hearts and has been left holding the sack, so to speak.

If she's wise she'll terminate the affair speedily once and for all. When she has eliminated completely the dregs of bitterness from her heart, perchance a real man will cross her path and lead her to the way of honorable love.

Her letter follows:
Dear Miss Stoddard: What do you think—should a wife be left in ignorance of the following disgusting circumstances? For two years the husband deceived me about living with his wife—said it was his mother with whom he occupied his apartment and as he used to call me at all hours of day or night from his home—I had no reason to doubt him as to that statement—when I discovered different—purely by accident—things had gone too far and I believe I was ready and eager to believe any plausible explanation to lessen the mental chaos that I found myself in.

Then he told me they were not living together as man and wife and that as soon as their daughter was a little older she was going to get a divorce—and I believed him again as he never went home much either for dinner or for evenings, so I believed that they had some sort of an understanding. Then I broke with him for awhile—then two years ago he persuaded me to listen to him again—that his wife had gone east and was not going to return and that an immediate divorce was in the offing—again I became involved and lost the love of my family—and also bore the aimost open ostracism of my friends. A few months ago she returned and he said that she came because of business and would return very soon, but that is seven months ago and she is still here and they are living in the same house although he tries to convince me that it is only for economic reasons.

This way I have wasted eight years of my life for a very shabby reason—now I very bitterly feel that she is to blame as much as I or he—if she had been properly interested in her husband's whereabouts and had not closed her eyes to a lot of things—this could not have happened to me.

She has all the things that I have forfeited, to give her husband the things that she did not give him. He has ruined two chances where I may have happily married—and I am sick of being noble and helping to conspire to keep this knowledge from her.

Should Girls Save?
Dear Miss Stoddard: What do you and your readers think about girls saving their money?

It seems that all of my girl friends (who are stenographers as I am) spend their money on fur coats, very latest style dresses, etc. They don't save a cent but do have nice clothes and more dates.

I now have saved about $700 even though I have taken a nice trip each year on my vacation, and do lots of horseback riding and golfing. My work and street clothes now are very good but extremely conservative, although I do have nice evening dresses.

Has a girl a better chance to get a good husband with a bank account, with clothes, or does it just depend upon herself I am now 25 with no prospects of getting married.

A bank account or fine clothes would be of little or no consequence to Mr. Right. However, to the man who is interested in a wife who would manage the home on a sound financial basis, the bank account would prove that she would be an efficient manager in this respect.

Fine feathers and superficial airs will attract the play boys, but it isn't the girl who has the most dates that always draws the best husband.

Methodists' Reception Planned

With plans laid for a gala event, First Methodist church members will assemble en masse at a reception off Dr. George A. Warner and Mrs. Warner and new members of the church next Thursday night.

The event will celebrate the return of the Rev. Dr. Warner to the pulpit here, voted recently at the Southern California conference of Methodist churches. Members who have joined the church during the past year will be feted along with the minister and his wife.

Plans are under direction of the Women's Aid and the Dorcas society of the church. Mrs. Lulu Blackburn and Mrs. Louis Allen, presidents of the two organizations, are in charge of refreshments.

Fred P. Jayne and Mrs. F. W. Slabaugh of the choir are directing the program. Mrs. G. E. Burns is planning the receiving line.

Invitations were being issued this week to all new members to attend the affair. More than 400 persons were present at last year's reception.

The Thinkers

Wherein women of the community express their views on topics of particular interest to women. If there is a question that interests or puzzles you, suggest it, and we will collect opinions on it for you!

What in your opinion is the proper bed time for small children, and why?

Mrs. James K. Givens—I have two children of my own, and I am very careful to see that they are in bed by 8 o'clock. One is 8 years old and the other nearly 11, so you can see I'm not at all in favor of late bed time for children. Small children especially, play hard and they need their rest. The rest they get in napping isn't as valuable as their night sleep, and if they get up early, they really should go to bed at an early hour.

Mrs. J. F. Miller—I'm a grandmother. My children were put to bed early, and my grandchildren have an 8 o'clock bed-time hour. I don't think it's good for small children to be up late.

Mrs. Floyd A. Mitchell—I have daughter, 12, and another just five and one-half years old. I enjoy my children, and when they are in bed early, and together in the evening, we play games and have music, or if it's cool and pleasant, I let them play outside, so that they don't have an extremely early bedtime hour. If they are tired, and need more rest, though, I see that they get it. I don't think one can set a positive rule, because different households run on different schedules.

Mrs. C. C. Briscoe—There has never been any question in my mind but that early bedtime for children is a very important matter. Lack of sleep makes children irritable, and nothing helps their disposition more than regular hours and plenty of sleep. I've seen the difference in children at the end of late hours and irregular bedtime.

Mrs. R. R. Russick—Of course small children should have an early bed hour and lots of rest. Otherwise, they get nervous and tired. You can always tell the following day whether children have been in bed early and had enough sleep. For the very young child I should say between 7 and 8 o'clock was a good bedtime hour.

Guests included a group of friends of Miss Eshbaugh, who has been a guest in the home of Mrs. Vance on several occasions.

Yorba Lindan Leads Full Life

A life that is filled with widely varied artistic, intellectual and humanitarian interests, a reputation as an artist and a composer, a quarter-century record as a happy wife, and a home which for years has been the rendezvous of many noted individuals—these are the portion of Mrs. Karl H. Seamans, known to her friends as Emma J. Moore Seamans of Yorba Linda.

To follow Mrs. Seamans in retrospect through her busy life which began when as a girl of 14 she left home in a little pony-drawn buggy to give music lessons in towns near her home in Wilmington, Ohio, is to be impressed by the multiplicity of her activities.

As a child of five years, she began to play on the little melodeon which is now a treasured item in her attractive hillside home. "Never let thy life touch the life of anyone, unless it be for good," the young girl's Quaker mother admonished her as she picked up the reins and drove off.

At 14 time went on, Emma enlarged her talents to include teaching the various stringed instruments, and she also began to write orchestrations. When she was 14, her first song was composed and published.

Married 25 Years

Thirty-two years ago, she left Ohio to come to Los Angeles and open a studio. She taught there and in Whittier, and 25 years ago last Oct. 7, was married to Carl Seamans.

In 1913, they came to Yorba Linda and purchased a citrus grove. Since then, Mrs. Seamans has done radio work and has had her compositions sung in the Hollywood bowl, in the Lark Ellen Echo bowl by Madame Ellen Beach Yaw, whom she numbers among her special friends, and on programs throughout the Southland.

With a poetic heritage traceable to two great poets, Thomas Moore and Benjamin West, and with a southern grandmother who steeped her in the folklore of the old south, Mrs. Seamans naturally writes spirituals with great understanding.

Her Best Numbers

"Echoes from de Cotton Fields" she counts as her best negro number. "The Swiss Wedding Song" as the best lyric, and her "Romance of the Beautiful Blue Danube" as her most ambitious undertaking. She has more than 10 songs completed.

The Seamans home is enhanced by a number of large oil paintings done by Mrs. Seamans. The cuisine reflects her excellence as a housewife, and the garden is arranged according to her planning with her husband.

She has taught the blind and the deaf, worked with the Indians and made her home a real home for a number of Japanese boys and for a Korean, Warren Hahn, who was graduated from Fullerton District Junior college, Columbia college, Southwestern and Columbia university, whence he received his doctor's degree before returning to Korea to become a merchant.

"My dear American father and mother" is the way in which all the boys who have been in their home refer to the Seamans.

Many Activities

Mrs. Seamans is also actively interested in international relations study, the Eastern Star, White Shrine, Women's Christian Temperance union and in Placencia Round Table club.

Sunday evenings for years have been the signal for musical and artistic friends of the Seamans to meet at the Yorba Lindans' home for informal get-togethers.

The family guest book includes the signatures of and little messages from Frank Tenney Johnson, Francis White, Eli Harvey, Ellen Beach Yaw, J. Raymond Henry, Charles Wakefield Cadman, Nancy Virginia Austin, Ralph Waldo Trine, Dr. Joseph Moore, head of Lick observatory, and other celebrities, who have been honored at receptions in the home.

"Life Is To Serve" Mrs. Seaman philosophizes. "I count no one as rich or poor, but judge on the basis of character who are to be my friends. I live to love all mankind for I have learned long ago that we pay for every unkind thought we accept as our own."

TEAPOT TATTLE

By ELLEN SNEBLEY

"Shoes and ships"—for a change.

If you want to be highly entertained, to lose your own problems and enjoy vicariously a look into the innermost workings of a young Englishman's mind, read Beverly Nichols' "The Thatcher Roof" and "Down the Garden Path."

The irritatingly superior woman gardener who serves canned asparagus as a product of her own garden, the lovely lady who strikes attitudes and lavishes baby talk on Mr. Nichols' garden, and in short, the complete charm and humor of the books cannot be given you second-hand. I remembered them today because of a friend in Fullerton.

She read first one and then another of the books, and we compared notes on the most enjoyed parts. I took an increased interest in our garden, and she planted flowers in little pots outside her hotel apartment door.

Finally, Mr. Nichols' power of suggestion over came her. She purchased a home where she can overlook Fullerton and, on fair days, see the ocean blue in the distance.

She has a most attractive home, with a library of real worth, and outside, a garden of gay flowers and thrifty fruit trees. It has added much pleasure to her life and, because she is a gracious hostess, to the experience of many of her friends.

Some day I shall write to the English author and tell him this one effect of the pen in his hand.

Since we're dealing with personalities, I'll bring down a bit of wrath on my head by telling you my mother's experience this week.

She mailed a letter to her sister at a new address. It didn't arrive. A week or so passed. Then it was returned in another envelope.

"I received your letter by mistake, and thought it was addressed to a transient, so I read it," said a candid note clipped to the letter. "It renews faith in human nature to read such a friendly, kindly letter. I envy your friends your friendship. Please excuse my writing."

My mother's impulse (stified) was to reply: "Not your writing but your reading needs forgiveness."

Mrs. Sam Collins and the kiddies will keep the home fans going, and sun/swim this summer at their Newport Beach place while the Hon. Mr. Collins transacts his governmental duties in Washington, D. C. He will go eastward next week, according to present plans.

Jack Mulhall jr., son of the motion picture actor, caused a mild stir of excitement by dropping in on this week's Bel Cant rehearsal. He sat behind Director Earl Waycott, smoked a big black cigar (as in Hollywood) and grinned occasionally. He's summing up at Newport, he's tall, black curly hair, slim.

Can your son tie his shoelaces? Young Frank McDowell wasn't so skilled. His mother, Mrs. Harry McDowell, decided he'd have to improve his tying ability. So she fixed up a practice rigging on a chair, and Frank tied bows of stout brown rope. Now he's an expert at the tying art.

Glimpsed in passing: Along West Sixth street, a slender woman with a blue sunbonnet out watering her garden. A man stretched out under his automobile. . . . luscious pink oleander blossoms and purple bougainvillea at the side of a big oldish home. . . . west of Broadway, silver eucalyptus and clean young orange trees growing "hand in hand" in a long row along Memory lane. . . . on East Fifth street off Main, a girl in a sedan dropping a black felt hat out the car window just as a nice looking boy came striding along. . . . out on Berrydale road, a fat gray kitten carrying a fly on a table near the door of the Leslie Coleman's charmingly informal home on Flower street south of Seventeenth, that lovely low-spread walnut tree lane, a man standing in a wagon, driving two brown horses. . . . and on Orange avenue, a man all by himself bouncing a ball against the roof of his home.

For lots of fun, the Tattler recommends the country club's summer parties. . . . such as the barbecue and dance last night.

Hospitality should be the keynote of a country club, and it certainly is of our club. Among the side-glances gleamed were: The M. B. Wellingtons dancing together and smiling at each other. . . . Alyce (Mrs. Paul) Hall, very

VOL. 1, NO. 69

Saturday, July 20, 1935

Editor's Note—Col. V. Orange, our old friend who writes this column every Saturday, is indisposed today, so his good wife is doing his work. Here are a woman's views of current topics:

To Governor Merriam:

Don't forget—you've got a little dirt shoveling to do for our new city hall, a week from next Tuesday.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Mrs. Walter Scott Buchanan:

That was thoughtful of you to have fans installed in your home the other night when the housewarming was held. We wouldn't have been half so cool and comfortable if you hadn't.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Mrs. Fred Rowland:

While everybody's cheering Barbara, we women will get together and congratulate you for the splendid job of motherhood you've done on the young rodeo queen! You're not only a grand mother, but a grand person, all along the line.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Mrs. A. Lindley:

I read about you in the society page and I think you're grand! When I get to be your age I'm going to try to be just as keen and peppy and industrious as you. I'm clipping out the story about you to send along to a grandmother I know.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To the Men in Palm Beach Suits:

Being's how I'm known as a nice motherly sort of person I can suggest to you men who don white trousers for the summer that you get some sort of shadow-proofing system. The stripes I've seen this week would do a convict justice.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Mary Stoddard:

I was glad to see you arrive in Santa Ana to help the lovelorn here. I've wanted to do that sort of thing for a long time. There's nothing so interesting as helping two "broken" hearts get mended. I hope they'll take your advice. It's been pretty good so far.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Blanche Chandler:

This is a busy season for you and your installing staff from Torosa Rebekah, with ceremonies scheduled for lodges throughout the county. From reports, you must make a good-looking ensemble in your pastel frocks. Anything that can be done to enhance an installation ceremony is always welcome.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Mrs. Housewife:

Isn't it the limit, trying to think up and serve the family cool, appetizing menus that still maintain a dietetic balance? Anyway, as long as Junior is grinding away on the ice cream freezer handle, Mary Lou is cutting up cold fruit for salad, and Dad is hovering around suggesting a trip to the beach, you know where they all are, and that's a blessing!

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To My Fellow Women:

Don't be afraid to express your opinion when your turn comes to take part in The Thinkers column. Sometimes men don't take women's ideas seriously . . . but again, we're pretty good when it comes to budgeting and keeping the home pleasant, and if you don't think we're practical, compare our club treasuries with those of some of our husbands' clubs.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Santa Ana Ebell Clubwomen:

Laurels to you for your bighearted project, your day nursery. I saw the happy grins on the faces of some of the working mothers' children whose daytime home you're providing, and I wondered whether you've all visited the nursery as I did. If not, there's a big-thrill in store for you, and you'll realize more than ever what a fine piece of work you're really doing.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Country Club Members:

After last night's riproaring good time (one of the best I've had) I can't understand why your membership quota isn't completely filled and a waiting list established. Since I've let out the secret that there are "still a few good seats left," dust off the doormat at the clubhouse and be ready for a rush. Your club has hospitality, congeniality and charm to the 'nth degree.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

To Hubert Howell!

You deserve some recognition for the hot hours you spent on the roof of the First National bank this week reading temperatures with the thermometer scoring about 92° If people hadn't forgotten all the sticky days back in Iowa or Indiana where they came from, they wouldn't have fussed so about this little spurt of heat. Since they had to know what the figures were hour-by-hour, you were a good scout to get them. Here's for cooler weather.

MRS. V. ORANGE.

Whimsies of O. O. McIntyre

The automobile has sounded the knell of walking. There is only a straggly line of accomplished strollers. From William Shakespeare to our present day poet, the walking stick has inspired rich stuff in literature. So in the hope of inspiration I went rousing stretches in Westchester daily. Sometimes 10 miles. H. G. Wells is a sturdy rambler. And George Bernard Shaw's flying whiskers through Irish lanes were long a familiar sight. Meredith Nicholson did a magnificent poem on the swings outdoors. Dickens must have laid many miles of London sidewalk to heel to know the streets and mews so intimately. Pepys makes frequent references to his fatiguing strolls. Robert Louis Stevenson, Walt Whitman liked the feel of the blackthorn and Edna Millay the wind on her brow.

So in the hope of inspiration I went gipsying today. There's no better place to begin a walk than at that city crescent, Fifth avenue and 42nd street. To move by fit and start until one has reached such an unbroken meander as Central park. By that time the mind may be jiggled to a philosophic plane.

A lean and young fellow bipped out of the surrounding press eddied with me a moment before a flashing display of shirts and ties in a Ebbel's window. He wore a cattlemans' hat and a comfortable homespun suit the Texans call "store bought." "That yaller one there," he observed, pointing to a sunsety cravat, "is right purty." So we slid into easy conversation. He had been giving a bit of vagabonding himself, progressing from the Panhandle afoot, by bus and hitchhiking. Shuffling a bit uneasily, he inquired in embarrassed blurt: "Where is this here Sally Rand playing?" I confessed my unworldliness and he mumbled rather accusingly and with a trace of mockery: "I thought a feller in spats ort to know!"

Adventure No 2 took place in front of the imposing mansion which the junior Vanderbilt recently ta-taed. Another casual of the sidewalk took me for a strolling directory. He inquired how to get to a place called Jimmy's. He was a shade bewildered, thoroughly dispirited. It was somewhere right off the avenue. He had tarried there many hours night before. There was a hat check girl named Eleanor. He had left a package with her and came away without it. He had a claim check but lost it. "I'm in a hell of a fix," he said, and looked it.

Near the St. Moritz I came upon a newspaperman indulging the anking art. His day off and he was in mood for caper. But he had no sheet of blank paper awaiting and at a sidewalk table where we sat for a moment I ventured my envy. He thought all columnists should express the freedom of Walter Lippmann. According to him, Lippmann writes when he pleases, as the whim seizes. Often, I was told, Lippmann, instead of the usual copy, sent a brief note: "I'm not prepared to write anything today." Likely one must have an initial-trailing name to get away with that quotation. A. B. Ph. D. and a cluster of L.L.D.'s. Several years ago in a pique I grew rebellious. No more columns and that was that. The overlord of my syndicate thought that too bad but it was fortunate a man who could take my place was not taking a planned trip to Europe and would be just dandy for the job. He lifted the phone to call him and the way I snapped into a fake laugh. You know, just clowning. Having my little joke. One of my narrow squeaks! I had nervous indigestion for two days.

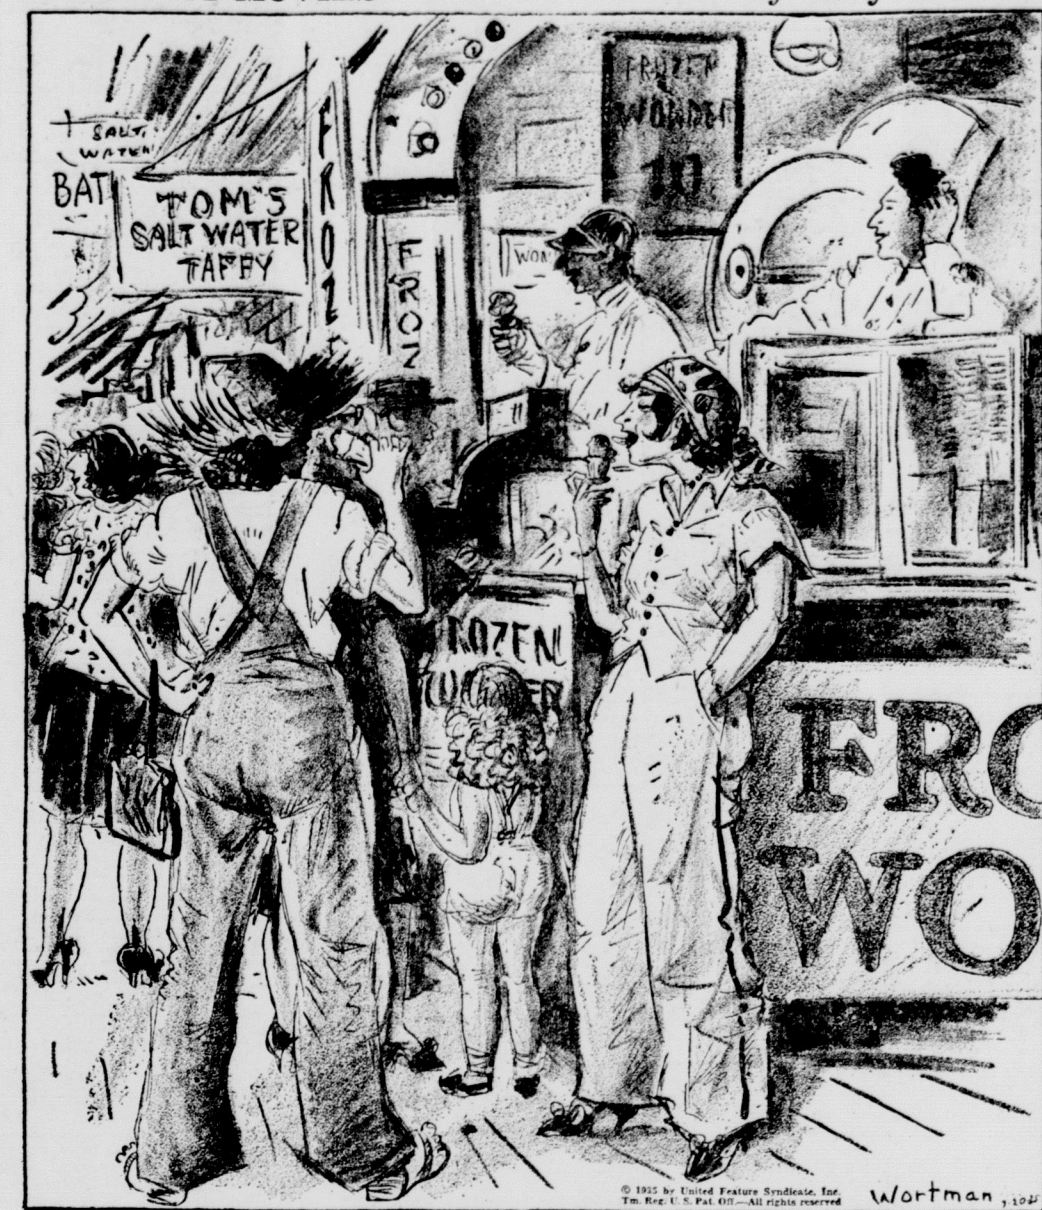

I reflected awhile on a bench under a wistaria bowered pergola. Dozing in an invalid's chair was an elderly Mark Twain gentleman whose face was a delicate chiseling from pain. Once he opened his eyes and glanced at me and smiled shyly. A moment later he winced, paled and a male nurse rushed and wheeled him away. I thought of a friend, knocked out lightning-like in the prime of life recently. I gave my condolences and received this: "To die for those we love were easy martyrdom. But to live in sacrificial throes of torture and to endure for tedious indefinite years, jilted by death, demands a higher fortitude than that of Socrates and Seneca." The despairing lines were quotations, but from whom I do not know.

But my saunter ended on a more cheerful note. At the 56th street entrance near the East Drive I stopped a moment before a chance communist, hot-gosseling a philistine from a soap box. I caught this: "We are going to make this singing world a singing world." That's what I want—get up every morning and sing bass. (Copyright, 1935)

The information bureau at New York police headquarters, asked how a certain man was to be found, and whose address was unknown, replied: "File a charge—we'll pick him up."

The Merry-Go-Round

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON, Friday, July 20.

Foreign diplomats scratched their heads in bewilderment last week when Cordell Hull, who had turned thumbs down on Emperor Haile Selassie's appeal under the Kellogg pact, suddenly reversed himself and came out with glowing praise of that pact.

Three things were behind this: Mr. Hull's own naivete; a call by the British ambassador; and a call by the French ambassador.

Mr. Hull is a most altruistic gentleman. He neither believes in, nor understands, diplomatic maneuvering. Reared in the mountains of Tennessee, accustomed to a vocabulary which would electrify the average diplomatic tea, Mr. Hull did not appreciate all the interpretations placed upon his blunt note vetoing the Ethiopian appeal.

Therefore, when the French and British ambassadors called upon him and reported that their governments felt he had deserted the Kellogg pact, Mr. Hull was fagged. He asked the two ambassadors to inform their governments that the United States by no means had deserted the pact.

Then feeling that there still might be some apprehension, it was arranged that a friendly newspaperman should ask questions of Mr. Hull in press conference. In reply, Mr. Hull issued his second statement, praising the Kellogg pact. However, he was careful not to mention either Ethiopia or Italy.

Net effect of Hull's two statements was that the United States took a pious interest in the preservation of the Kellogg pact but was prepared to do nothing about it.

NAVAL INFORMATION

FOREIGN naval attaches in Washington have become increasingly restive over the amount of information they receive from the navy department. They complain that they get less from their American naval colleagues than from reading the newspapers.

Especially has this complaint grown since the naval maneuvers in the Pacific. It came to a head at a meeting of naval attaches called by Vice Admiral Paul Yurevich Oras, of the soviet embassy, dean of the corps of naval attaches.

As a result of the meeting the naval attaches gave a dinner to Admiral William H. Standley, chief of U. S. naval operations. The affair took place with considerable pomp and ceremony. It was held at Washington's swankiest hotel. Three kinds of wine were served, with all the trimmings.

At the end, popped Admiral Oras and launched upon a speech. Admiral Standley looked somewhat surprised but he listened. He listened while Admiral Oras paid tribute to him, to the American navy and to the United States. He listened especially to Admiral Oras' conclusion, which was: "We only wish, Admiral Standley, that we could get a little more news about your excellent navy."

Admiral Standley's reply was brief. He said: "I thought we were just coming here like sailors to dine and enjoy each other. I didn't know we were going to make speeches."

"Regarding more information about the American navy, our policy is to give information with a string attached to it. We hold on to the string—so we can get a little information back."

Lemon Juice

Howdy, folks! A local picnicker has found that the immediate application of mayonnaise is a remedy for a bee sting. We have always believed that a use would some day be found for picnic mayonnaise.

The average successful business man doesn't realize what a failure he's been until after his son returns home from college and goes to work for him.

YE DIARY

Betimes home, and Dame Juice doth query idly, "Well, what you eat downtown for lunch to-day?" And I do reply idly, "Oh, I had some Weiner Rostratzen, Gansweissauer mit Bratkartoffeln, Paprika Wurste, Rinderbust in Casserole, Knackstuck and Lumbecker Saussichen." And Dame Juice doth retort, "Oh, fiddlesticks!" And so, friendly enough, to dinner.

Encounter Frank Pinkerton who says "Skinny, you look hungry. Would you like to have something to eat?" And he couldn't have said anything farther from my feelings. If there was ever a time when I did not care to eat Frank found that time, but after a few minutes conversation, with his varied explanations and interpretations, Frank and I finally got down to a mutual understanding, and after that temperatures and orange prices and supreme court decisions—well, they didn't mean a thing to us.

What is this? A conspiracy? George Jeffrey sends me a card from the southern part of Spain about the beautiful Queen Isabella and that little affair with Columbus, which finally became notorious, and then another card comes in from Don Jerome who has also fallen for that Columbus stuff, but Don did not go so far as George for information or atmosphere. Don stuck to the stars and stripes and only got as far as Ohio. He felt surrounded by a flock of Elks, and then he didn't need as much water as Columbus. There is a suggestion in Jeffrey's card that my interest is largely centered in the historical. I resent the inference. I'm still a competitor.

SKINNY SKRIBBLES

Some fellows carry that "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," entirely too far. If James McCain, of 1103 Hickory, continues to stop his automobile at 935 Oak, and radiates that benign exterior, which is not an actual reflection of his feelings, well, he'll stop once too often. Every time I try to prevent two blades of grass from growing where one grew before, Mac drifts in. There isn't any valid objection to the pause, but when the darned cuss starts to laugh that's when the old disposition goes feminine and puts on the ruffles.

Its vacation time. I can tell. Too many invitations to go fishing comin' in to deceive me. And the reason they are coming in is because I don't go fishin'! What a swell bunch of friends I've got.

Now I've got a nice little family dispute on the fire, and wasn't it hot enough anyway? Credit given for scrupulous care of a lawn went to the wrong party. At least that's the information which comes to me now. A willingness to make a correction was refused, on the ground that the correction might be worse than the original statement.

Vernon King has gone adult. For some time the Garden Grove News has been tabloid. There isn't space for Vernon to get in all the news that he collects for subscribers, so the paper goes into the major size next week. After the acreage is measured between the adult and the juvenile there probably won't be much difference, but the appearance will be in the publisher's favor. A little deception now and then, is practiced by the best of men.

I've got a newspaper friend from a location just above Los Angeles who comes down periodically to find out what I'm doing, and what annoys me is that he finds out.

Catherine Kline comes down from San Francisco to visit friends on the Irvine ranch. Catherine decides to spend part of the evening at the movie. San Francisco people have that habit. Its bank night, but that meant nothing to Catherine at the time—it does now. Friends insisted she register. She remonstrates and tells 'em she is from San Francisco, and they say that don't make any difference, but it did. When the winners were announced Catherine had won a cool hundred dollars, so I am informed.

My friend E. S. Gilbert, who has a birthday anniversary today, will not get the exhilaration out of the event that he is entitled to, because he is ill, but that does not prevent his friends from wishing him returning health and happiness, and that's just what they are doing. Hope this is an encouragement to E. S., in his contest to regain a healthful condition.

Why is it that I was not advised of the departure of Terry Stephenson for San Diego, remains unexplained except on the grounds of competition. Official information is that Terry went to the exposition city to attend a postmaster's convention. Son Terry said that the reason he no publicity was on account of a prevailing fear that some one might break into the house. All the more reason why son should stand sentinel and keep the home fires burning.

One Man's Opinion

By Duncan Ellsworth Clark

EDITOR'S NOTE—Here is an informative, analytical daily feature on current topics. The opinions expressed in this column are not necessarily the same as those held by The Journal.

Yosemite, Fairyland of the Tourist

Yosemite, fairyland of the tourist. Much has been written about this masterpiece of scenic beauty. Poets have exhausted the language in depicting the grandeur of its heights and depths and sheer immensity—its precipitous crags, domes and pinnacles; its dazzling waterfalls booming continuous thunder; its gilded pools, motionless, unrippled, resting; its fettered trees and happy rocks as nature's alchemy produced them.

The valley's pristine solitude has been completely shattered. The glare and reeking sights and odors of the white man's civilization are here, as everywhere, fatal to peace and quiet. Traffic and parking worries hold their usual grip. Yosemite attracts more visitors yearly than all other national parks combined. Jazzies rear their hydra-heads, daring to grin and leer and slobber in the very presence of immensity. Where the valley's unspoiled natives, years ago, gathered in solemn assembly under the pro-testingegis of Glacier Point, invoking the beneficence of Divine Guidance, there throngs nightly a motley herd of blathering tourists, always hungry for pampering entertainment. Squawking saxophones and squealing clarinets rend tranquility to shreds. Disgusting cigarette fumes, offensive enough in our enervated living another the exhilarating tang of pine and cedar. The milling crowd may be emotionally drunk but nowhere does the spirit of reverence find a welcome. Paganism, worshipping self-indulgence and animal-comforts runs rampant through the land.

Yosemite is a family playground, its numerous tent-cities testifying to its group appeal. Easy informality and relaxation are the prized possessions of those who seek them. Here is the chance, if one desires, to rest, to play, to recharge the batteries of one's heart and soul from the fountains of a boundless world and large content.
